ELMHURST PARSON FINDS GOOD IN MAN BY BEING A JUROR

The Rev. H. P. Belcher Sat Beside a Saloonkeeper and Liked Him.

Queen's has a minister of the Gospel who believes in performing his civic duties, even to serving on a jury and to advocating public improvements and the general welfare of his district. He is the Rev. Harry P. Belcher, pastor of the Elmhurst Methodist Church, who has just completed service as a member of the petit jury of the Queens County Supreme Court. When he appeared before Justice Van Sicken, one of the court attendants suggested that he could be excused because of his calling. If he so desired, he responded that he did not want to be excused, but wanted to serve for the experience he would get. Yesterday, having finished his term, he was asked to say something about the experiences of a juror.

"I was very glad that I was called upon to perform this duty," said Mr. Belcher. "I knew that I could be excused, but I believe that a member of my profession should perform every duty that comes to a citizen to perform. For that reason I did not want to shirk my duty. I believe that even the most distinguished and the wealthiest men in our communities should be willing to serve on juries. Then no complaint could justly be made about the inferior mental calibre of our juries. I want to say, however, that I was greatly surprised by the men who had been summoned to attend this term of the Queens court. I was ready to meet men of rather indifferent standing. Instead, I found that all the men had an adequate idea of their responsibilities as citizens and were well able to decide the questions placed before them. Then too the attorneys in the cases did not, as is sometimes supposed, attempt to get men of a low order of mentality.

"I had a most interesting experience in one particular. On one of the cases that I was selected as a juror the man who sat next to me was a saloonkeeper. In the case presented to us we had to decide upon the facts in a damage case for injuries. I found that this saloonkeeper was a thorough business man; that he had integrity and was inspired with as great a desire to do the right thing as any man could be. Although I have had a wide experience in my calling, this was the first time that I had opportunity to get so intimate a knowledge of a man of his calling.

"What was the saddest experience to me, however, was my discovery that people take an oath and do not seem to realize its solemnity and regard it as of very little importance. I discovered people going on the stand, forgetting that they had solemnly sworn to tell the truth. Here is an opportunity for us to set up other ideals for men and women."

Some time ago Mr. Belcher organized the Elmhurst Civic Association, which has a membership of more than 200 among the best known men of every denomination in Elmhurst and which association has taken an aggressive position in matters of local importance and improvements.

Panhandlers' Local, 666, Is on the Blink, Thanks to Bill Beirns's Coup d'Etat

It Was a Dull Day at Essex Market Court, so the Peerless Finger Printer Stirs Things Up and Grabs Off the Only Office in Sight, While Hiding the Noted East Side Social Organization Under a Camouflage of Cryptic Hieroglyphics.

"A NY news" Joe Levy, the Duke of Essex Street, was asked by the Essex Market Court reporter.

"Just put my name in and it will add pep to any story written."

That was something on a dull day. But Pete Walker, who usually has a story about Harlem or Bridgeport on the tip of his tongue, failed, and even Jerry Creedon, who recites the legal poetry that informs the prisoners that they may phone their friends, if they have any, couldn't conjure up a single tear of riggle. There wasn't even a nice murder in the entire district.

Bill Beirns, the peerless finger printer, was toying with his ink roller and reading the Fingerprint Echo, when the sad situation was put up to him.

"This is serious," he declared solemnly. "Today is Columbus Day, the longshoremen are on strike, the printers are out, and I can't buy any sugar in Richmond. It is clearly our duty to start something. I shall call out my local."

Panhandlers' Local, 666, answered the tocsin to a man, and the business of the week was taken up. Motions were made favoring Prohibition and resolutions of confidence sent both to President Wilson and Senator Lodge. Birthday cards were then mailed to Sam Donafski, the best customer the court ever had, Joe Waterman, the official court cheer-leader, and Gen. Pershing. Assistant District Attorney Drenzo at the same time mailed a last year's Valentine to D'Annunzio. "Now," said Bill, who elected himself President when he formed the local, "there is something that must be done. We must change the name of the local."

"I think it is very appropriate," spoke up Pete Walker. "Overruled," thundered Bill. "It may be appropriate but it isn't tactful."

"It favors of corruption," declared Mr. Beirns the janitor. "That is just the argument. It must be changed or we will all lose our jobs. What are suggestions for a new name?"

"The International Glee Club," suggested Clerk Rice.

"The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Court Attendants," offered Lawyer Dittler.

"The Diamond Cutters Local," volunteered the Duke.

"Now that all the suggestions are in, I will tell you the name I selected and which will be used hereafter. These are military times, and the Essex Market Post of the A. O. O. R. is the dope."

"What do they stand for?" inquired Clerk Kunal with some emotion.

"Ancient Order of The Sons of Rest," declared Bill in a stentorian voice.

"Where does the second 'O' come in?" asked Mr. Burns the janitor.

"Overruled. It doesn't make any difference what it stands for."

It was then voted to hold a secret ballot for another President. Bill counted the votes, tore them up and declared he was again elected unanimously. After voting to keep the minutes a secret the meeting adjourned, and Panhandlers' Local became a relic of the moist and happy past. All contributions after this date will be forwarded to "The Secretary, Essex Market Post, A. O. O. R., care of the Grand Old Temple of Justice." No postage required. Drop in any mail box on the east side.

SEEKS TO EXPEDITE BILLS FOR SOLDIERS

Congressman Ferris Suggests Special Committee—Critics Mondell's Measure

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—A special committee of twelve Republicans and nine Democrats for the consideration of all bills or resolutions for the vocational rehabilitation, education or benefit of soldiers was asked for in the House yesterday by Representative Ferris (Dem., Okla.), who declared that the soldiers were anxious to know what Congress is going to do, and are discouraged because Congress is doing nothing. In discussing the Mondell bill he said:

"The Mondell Soldiers' Land Bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands to the House on Aug. 1. The Republicans have had two caucuses on it and have been unable to agree. The soldiers over the country are passing resolutions against it and are apparently opposed to it."

"Without any criticism of the Public Lands Committee, of which I am a member, it appears it has reported a bill in the interest of reclamation and in the interest of the development of the West, and which in all probability would be acceptable to the Far Western States but noticeably not feasible nor acceptable in the Eastern and Middle Western States."

Fifteen Nationalities in Soldiers' Play at Upton.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., Oct. 14.—A cast of fifty soldiers, representing fifteen nationalities, appeared in a three-act play, "Christophers Columbus," at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium last evening. The men have been trained to speak English in the last three months at the re-educational center conducted here by the War Department as an experiment in Americanization. Gen. W. Nicholson, camp commander; Gen. B. Barnard, camp executive officer; Major J. H. Burns, commander of the center, and many other officers were present.
